She also welcomed another 80-plus tenured faculty to MSU, as well as a number of Fixed-Term Faculty this fall and Academic Specialists. She noted that Friday was the groundbreaking for the new STEM building, which was partially funded by the State of Michigan.

She stated that MSU has not had any capital outlay money from the State of Michigan for several years, so the funding for the new STEM building was an important step in expanding MSU’s instructional space on campus. The location of this new building will be where the old Power Plant is situated. Located on each end of this building there will be a column of Science and Mathematics Engineering spaces, as well as instruction spaces. The central part of the complex will house a variety of student functions, everything from the Office for Undergraduate Research, to the Hub for Teaching, Learning and Technology.

Provost Youatt added that the Presidential Search Committee would be deciding on a search firm. She said that she was invited to look at the proposals from the multiple consultants who would like to assist with the process. Provost Youatt stated that she does not have a formal role in the selection process, but that her office, through Dr. Terry Curry, herself and others, will provide the needed resources. She noted that the Presidential Search Committee is undergoing training in implicit bias, and how to conduct an inclusive search.

When asked about the numbers of incoming freshman students, Provost Youatt replied that by next Friday they have an official number. She said that the number looks to be close to 8,400 students, but that the official number could be 8,200 students.

Provost Youatt was thanked officially for her having “open” office hours during the previous Spring Semester, where individuals could come and speak to her directly about their concerns. Provost Youatt replied that she will be continuing this opportunity for the University community.

Rob McCurdy reported that his office has been discussing how, with various units and individuals, about how they currently consume IT (Internet Technologies) services, and what they think they will need in the future. He said that MSU’s HR (Human Resources) classification system has also been reviewed, including the way IT classifies individuals in IT-related roles. He added that he would appreciate people reaching out to him regarding any questions that they might have. He noted that IT is interested in how it continues to partner with MSU to deliver better IT services.

Professor Moriarty responded that currently there are many faculty members who do not have trust in a centralized IT. She stated that she believes that central IT in the past has not been responsive and not helpful in terms of assisting people in a timely fashion. She commented on Interim President Engler’s statement of disinterest in “what faculty thought”. She asked, “How can faculty bridge this communication gap with the Interim President on such issues as the reconfiguration of IT?” Discussion ensued. Various concerns were expressed about IT Service locations, and about individuals perhaps losing their positions with the reconfiguration of IT. Dr. Hoppenstand also raised a concern about the lack of visibility of the Academic Governance website on the MSU main webpage.

9.4. Issue Regarding the Board of Trustees (BOT) and the Michigan Constitution, Dr. Rob LaDuca

Dr. LaDuca noted that the Steering Committee has heard about the state of the Presidential Search Committee from Provost Youatt regarding the selection of the search firm. He stated, “I do want to register some modicum of disappointment that of the six members elected by Faculty Senate to serve on the Search Committee, only one was suggested, and one was taken up. The remaining five have said that they are willing to serve as alternates, but we had people who were involved in searches at other universities, major universities. We have had people that were the NSF Directorate Chair and they were passed over.”

Dr. LaDuca added, “We do acknowledge that the Board wanted to limit the Presidential Search Committee to 19 people. Then we figured the Board was overseeing the process. However, I was personally dismayed to see that certain members of the Board of Trustees are actually on the Search Committee, especially people who have had a checkered history in acknowledging the issues that this University has faced. That was disheartening, but we are going to work with the Board as presently constituted, as the Search Committee is constituted. We are going to ask that person, the Faculty Senator who was selected, to as much as possible, inasmuch as she can, to give the nondisclosure agreements that have to be signed, so that she could keep Faculty Senate aware of the process and how things are going.”

Professor Moriarty noted that not one individual representing the Arts is serving on the Presidential Search Committee. Others expressed concerns about representation issues as well, regarding the Presidential Search Committee. Dr. LaDuca noted that changing the composition of the MSU Board of Trustees in a State of Michigan Constitutional issue, and the procedural difficulties in changing the State Constitution. Discussing ensued.

About addressing transparency concerns regarding the Presidential Search process, Dr. LaDuca reported that Board of Trustee member, Melanie Foster, has volunteered to come to the Faculty Senate meeting on September 11 to answer questions from the faculty.

9.6. Academic Specialists as Voting Members, Dr. Gary Hoppenstand

Dr. Hoppenstand reported that there is a problem about the specific language regarding how Academic Specialists are going to be elected. Such language has not been vetted, or approved. He stated that specific language for Academic Specialists elections need to be developed, noting that there is no consistency from college to college in terms of how the election process is conducted. It was agreed that these issues would be brought to the University Committee on Academic Governance for review and discussion.
