4. President’s Remarks – Lou Anna K. Simon

There has been a great deal of discussion surrounding the future of WKAR at Michigan State. The original mission for WKAR was to be a national leader in the area of instructional television and the use of media to augment instruction. Over time it has become something different. The discussion examined both a review of the station’s mission for MSU, and as an operation that provided programming available elsewhere. The question then becomes how to meet and exceed our public service mission around new technologies and continue meet our educational mission as an institution. What kinds of academic experiences and innovations are available for faculty and students? What opportunities exist in the research areas of engineering and technology for our faculty? The Board of Trustees supported the decision to maintain WKAR and to invest in its ability to become an asset for the University. As a result of the decision we have partnered with Detroit Public Television to move forward programs of national educational content in the digital environment and not just as an over the air broadcast. One of the major areas affected by this partnership is its ability to develop and provide strong educational programming for children at the local, regional and national level.

MSU faculty have been and remain actively engaged in water problems that exist in Flint. The downside for the issue centers on the pressures it will create on the budget for the State of Michigan. The Federal Government will provide aid but it is doubtful that it will offset the total expenses.

The town hall discussion will continue. I encourage the academic governance community to engage in the conversations and to work with the Office for Inclusion and Intercultural Initiatives as it continues its work in this area. There will be another town Hall on police and public safety.
